Henley Royal Regatta course construction

Directions for navigation and general information during the construction period:

The Henley Royal Regatta course is being constructed during the above dates. The following restrictions will apply to all boats, including power driven, manually propelled or sailing, which are navigating anywhere between Henley Bridge and the downstream end of Temple Island:

All boats travelling downstream must navigate on the left, Berkshire/Remenham side of the river within the regatta course.

All boats travelling upstream must navigate on the right, Buckinghamshire/Fawley Court side of the river.

Boats may cross from one side of the river to the other provided they do not impede any boats travelling up or downstream.

No mooring is allowed within the regatta course booms at any time.

No mooring is allowed to the bank in the known as The Narrows or to the adjacent regatta course booms (The Narrows is indicated with an X on the map overleaf).

Furthermore, we hereby advise that the regatta course including all of the piles, booms and boxes are the property of Henley Royal Regatta. The Regatta may choose to take civil action against any person who causes damage to their structures.
